THE COACHING CHRONICLES

VOLUME 1 ISSUE 4

STRATEGIES FOR REMOTE TEACHING

DEAR INSTRUCTORS,

The prospect of navigating school closure and preparing for online teaching is overwhelming, at best. We know. How do you create community and establish consistency in the face of so much upheaval, and from a screen, no less? Where to even start? In hopes of relieving some of the stress, we have compiled a manageable set of excellent resources to help you build your online instructional skills and foster a productive, supportive virtual community.
Best of luck and stay safe!

FTCC FACULTY RESOURCES

Click on our Faculty Resources link to find a stock pile of resources and tools to use for every content area!! This link is updated often so check back to see what new resources have been added!!

THE MOTHERLODE

If you read only one thing in this newsletter, this blog presents a wealth of options for how to teach online. There are structures for lessons, assessments, and creative ways to re-think teaching practices for distance-learning.

HOW TO QUICKLY (AND SAFELY) MOVE A LAB COURSE ONLINE

Important information in this article on how to move a lab online!

HOW TO BUILD COMMUNITY IN YOUR ONLINE CLASS

This article describes six fun and engaging activities that can be adjusted to help you to build community remotely.These activities will help you to recreate a sense of community.

HOW TO HELP STUDENTS KEEP LEARNING THROUGH A DISRUPTION

Take a look at this article!

Bonus Episode 8: #coachbetter E... coachbetter.tv

#coachbetter bonus - our 2nd roundtable discussion featuring educators working in international schools in the Asia region, currently dealing with ongoing emergency school closures due to COVID-19.

Emergency School Closures Due to COVID 19 Roundtable Discussion 2

WONDERING HOW TO MAKE AN ONLINE CLASS MORE PERSONAL?

A lot of online teaching happens in the world of ESL. Regardless of your subject area, ESL teachers have great tips to share. This article shares strategies to make an online class more engaging for students.

CONTACT YOUR INSTRUCTIONAL COACHES

This link will take you to the Instructional Coaches page on the FTCC Faculty & Staff page.